

Jan Wilson, owner of Dog-Gone Fun, has been in the dog profession for over 25 years. Her love for dogs is evident in all aspects of her life, from her experience in veterinarian science, to dog training, and in her personal life. Growing up in Maine, Jan has owned dogs from childhood, and currently has three wonderful dogs at home.

Jan started working at a veterinary office at the age of 16, learning all aspects of the animal world. She graduated from college with bachelor's degree in biology. She supported herself through college by working as a veterinarian technician.

After college she managed a kennel and worked closely with a dog behaviorist. The experience of managing the kennel gave Jan a working knowledge of the everyday care of multiple dogs and their personalities. Her work with the dog behaviorist led her into dog training, teaching Puppy classes, obedience, and working with dogs with behavioral problems. After moving to North Carolina in 2000, Jan started Carolina Canine Solutions, a successful private dog behavioral and training business which has thrived in the Triad area.

Jan has taught dog training classes at the Kernersville Parks and Recreation Department for two years and has worked at Kernersville Veterinary Office for 4 years. She is a member of the Kernersville Dog Park committee, helping to raise interest and money for a great dog socialization area in the Fourth of July Park in Kernersville. In her spare time, Jan's interest in dogs led her to dog sports. Fly Ball and Agility training for her own dogs has led to all three of her dogs being titled in Fly Ball, a relay race competition for dogs. She enjoys competing with her Dogs as well as teaching the sport to others. Jan is now ready to open a dog day care facility in Kernersville, called DOG-GONE FUN. Her extensive experience with dogs will make this endeavor a great success and a much needed service in the Kernersville area.
